Deep Play: Korede, Corazon.

As a part of the inauguration of "Secondary Narratives," a collaborative of independent spaces and curators, The Wand will present an exhibition entitled, Deep Play in two parts. The first application of this project takes the subheading, Korede, Corazon, and is inspired by Korede Amojó's indelible character, wherein The Wand's founding director, Melissa Steckbauer has invited him to participate in a project about love, exploring his relationship to the area of his home in Moabit.

As a living, breathing artwork, Korede and Melissa will co-create the project in August. The first lens will be a view to Korede, documenting and processing information that he volunteers about significant people and places within his kiez. The next phase will be an engagement of Korede with his community, wherein the resulting collection of images and objects will be presented throughout the neighborhood. Relating to the kiez as a living entity with its own needs, challenges, and desires, this work will be "written" as a love letter to Moabit.

Secondary Narratives links four exhibitions within one format. It interrelates the work of independent spaces and curators. Each exhibition is at once autonomous and a part of the larger narrative. Secondary Narratives 2014 is a collaboration between Bublitz & Lukas Töpfer, Julia Martha Müller & Frederiek Weda, Neue Berliner Räume, and The Wand. Secondary Narratives will participate in Project Space Festival 2014.
